“Social Relations Across the Lifespan”

Through an intersectional lens of age and gender, panelists will explore the impact of significant life events on social relations across the lifespan. The changing roles that families experience when faced with significant stressors such as immigration, the onset or exacerbation of cognitive decline of older family members and associated caregiving needs will provide context. Panelists will delve into the role of women as primary caregivers and the importance of intergenerational involvement as well as the viability of personal technology in aiding overall well-being. Policy recommendations incorporating Social Development Goals throughout the life course will be explored.
